

This report seems like a repeat of last month's: the bulk of my time has been spent with the aftermath of the Evergreen upgrade. Even though we tested things extensively, there have been a number of places that tested fine then in production were a problem. Our host, Lyris in Atlanta, has not left us completely pleased here, but at least we are making regular headway against the pile of bugs.

On November 19, Chenoweth Roofing finally came to address our warranty claims and worked for a couple of days. When they were finished, I took a number of photos documenting the after to compare to the before, and submitted them to the city of Coldwater (report later in this month's packet). I have had no official response from them yet.

Submitted by

John Rucker